This literature review discusses the potential benefits garnered from further study of the pathways associated with these genetic conditions and infectious disease resistance (or hypersusceptibility).

Genetic diseases conferring resistance to infectious

Genetically modified crops (GM crops or biotech crops) are plants used in agriculture, the DNA of which has been modified using genetic engineering methods. In most cases, the aim is to introduce a new trait to the plant which does not occur naturally in the species. Examples in food crops include resistance to certain pests, diseases, environmental conditions, reduction of spoilage ...

Race and health refers to how being identified with a specific race influences health. Race is a complex concept that changes across time and space and that depends on both self-identification and social recognition. In the study of race and health, scientists organize people in racial categories depending on different factors such as: phenotype, ancestry, social identity, genetic makeup and ...

Conclusion: it is not clear whether adiponectin levels have any clinical significance for risk stratification in cardiovascular disease or if they simply reflect the activation of complex underlying mechanisms.

Relationship between adiponectin, obesity and insulin

Typically, the kinetoplastids are depicted as long slender organisms. However, the kinetoplastids exhibit several morphological forms which are defined by the position of the kinetoplast in relation to the nucleus and the length of the undulating membrane (see morphological forms). Cellular features of the kinetoplastids include: . A single flagellum present in many of the morphological forms.
